1. At the recent Warsaw conference the Poles showed themselves most concerned about their security. They tried to obtain additional guarantees for the inviolability of the Oder-Neisse line. In these efforts they were, however, not supported by the representatives of other satellite states at the conference and the standing of the course of the meetings. 25X1
[REDACTED] the course of the meetings.
[REDACTED] of becoming the commander-in-chief of the East Bloc [REDACTED]. It was obvious that Poland was nevertheless disappointed at Konev's appointment to this position.
2. Czech Prime Minister Siroky also mentioned the threat to the integrity of the western border of his country but refrained from demanding special security measures. Bulgaria apparently had the same security apprehensions as Poland. Chervenkov's speech almost exclusively dwelled on the dangers threatening his country from the south and east. This indicated that the last combined NATO maneuvers in the Eastern Mediterranean had greatly impressed Bulgaria. Chervenkov requested that the Soviet efforts at normalizing relations with Yugoslavia be extended to Turkey and Greece. Bulganin said that Turkey would soon be made proposals designed to relax tensions.
3. Hungary and [REDACTED] were in a [REDACTED] position at the conference. The Hungarian [REDACTED] was not satisfied with the solution of the Austrian [REDACTED]. Grotewohl seemed to be surprised at the resolution not to convert the KVP into a national army.
